FUEL PROBLEM STALLS LAUNCH OF SATURN I

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)-A fuelling problem in the first stage forced postponement today of an attempt to launch the Saturn I rocket which is intended to orbit the world's heaviest satellite.

When the postponement was first announced the officials said they would make another launching attempt Wednesday. However, they said later a new firing date had not been determined

Police believe the gunman was attempting to track down informers who supplied customs authorities with the information that led to his arrest in San Diego.

The couple in the car, a 25-year-old man and an 18-year-old girl, were jumped by the gunman outside the home of Wilf Tyldesley Sunday.

Tyldesley said a black car with two men inside pulled up first and then a green car, with Washington licence plates and occupied by the couple, drove up.

LABOR ACCUSES POLICE OF STRIKE-BREAKING

VANCOUVER (CP)—E. P. O'Neal, secretary of the B.C. Labour Federation, has accused Vancouver police of strike-breaking methods in a taxicab walkout.

He made the charge in a telegram to the police com-mission Friday, saying a police patrol car had crossed picket lines set up Wednesday in a strike at B.C. Radio Cabs.

The commission got an immediate denial from Police Chief Ralph Booth who denied the police car was involved in any strike-breaking action. A woman had asked the officers to get a taxi for an arthritic man who was unable himself to call a taxi. The police car went to the nearest taxi office, B.C. Radio Cabs, to relay the request.

Winston and President Roosevelt were forever chiding each other and swapping nonsense rhymes — it made a break, now and again, from more serious affairs.

The president loved to tease Winston but a wide-eyed, innocent Winston got one back on him at lunch one day at the White House, when Roosevelt asked what Clemenwas doing in the war. Winston acted as if he had never heard of the fantastic-ally active public life Eleanor Roosevelt led with her constant travels away from Washington, her visits to depressed areas, her public speaking, and her activities on behalf of the underprivileged everywhere.

Not Made to Measure

TT IS EASY TO ASCRIBE THE general unrest in eastern Africa to Communist plots—but it would not be very accurate. When the background factors in the situation are considered, the wonder is not that there is political trouble in the newly created states of Africa, but that there is not more.

Zanzibar, Uganda, Tanganyika, Kenya—the basic problem contains the common factor of unpreparedness. After many generations the people of these states, and of others like them in the great continent have suddenly achieved political independence. A few years of pre-liminary preparation, as had been offered in many British colonies and protectorates, cannot really instil in a people the habits of thought and temperament, the philosophy of living together as a political unit, which are necessary for the successful functioning of a democratic state.

Britain has devoted hundreds of years to development of this form government—a highly complex and delicate machine—and even yet has difficulties. Small wonder that a new state, only recently savage, when confronted with the terrible responsibility of free political choice and majority rule, frequently turns to the older form of leadership-the strongman. On the complex structure of democracy it superimposes the more familiar pattern of tribal leadership. The result is a democracy in name only, as in Ghana. Then, under the weight of autocracy, various elements of the population which have seen a glimmer of what the new freedom could be, or which see in themselves logical successors to the regime in power, seek to overthrow the government. There be Communist elements as well, but they are by no means an essential ingredient of the resulting

It is apparent that the mere establishment of independent, democratically constructed states is not enough. The Congo was thrown into the responsibilities of self-government almost without prepara-tion or resources. The result not only tore the country apart but almost involved the world in war. The complete answer is not known. There can be no removal of the road to self-government once the new state has set out, regard-less of how it may be abused. The solution for many will be to take the side road on which Ghana is now embarking. That country is voting in favor of becoming a socialist single-party state. The road to real democracy there will be a long one, for much of the permanence of Mr. Nkrumah's regime depends on his suppression of all opposition spokesmen and his enforcement of non-democratic laws.

It is a mistake for us to expect that newly emerging states will adopt our political forms exactly as we know them, or that they could immediately make them work even if they wished. But it is clear that the Western export which Africa needs most today is sound advice and education, and these are two of the hardest things to de-We have inaugurated the liver. SPECIAL REPORT PREpared for the United States Senate commerce committee gives added point to American anxiety over intrusion of big Russian fishing fleets into waters considered traditionally those of American fishermen.

The U.S.S.R. is concentrating on the construction of large, far-rang-ing fishing craft, factory ships and refrigerated vessels, the report says. Russian fishermen have already probed deeply into the eastern section of the Pacific. A program of aggressive expansion is under way by the Soviet industry and the results of that expansion unquestionably will crowd North American fishermen.

The report indicates the progress made in a predictable development. Fishermen go where there are fish unless they are curbed by binding agreement, or the ability of rivals to repel them.

In the North Pacific no convention prevents the Russians from invading grounds up to within the current three-mile limit. On the high seas they need recognize no fishing treaty binding on other nations

This emphasizes the obvious weakness of the expiring North Pacific treaty to which Canada, the United States and Japan have been parties. It also lends strength to Japanese objections to any renewal the abstention principle which holds salmon fishermen of that country west of the 175th meridian. Why, they may properly ask, should they keep out when nothing prevents the Russians from moving

Perhaps it is significant of this point in history that the chief interest in the new satellite lies in the fact that the United States and Russia will co-operate in conducting communications tests with it—the first instance of such a partnership.

A successful outcome to this venture may mean that further collaboration may take place, leading eventually to the full partnership in the conquest of space which was envisaged by President Kennedy.

HOW CALGARY DID IT

By JAMES H. GRAY

Without a Suburb Visible

Greater Victoria's problems of growth and development give added interest to this account of how the City of Calgary handled somewhat similar difficulties.

The Mayor of Bowness called on the Mayor of Calgary last week and discussed annexation. The first step thus was taken to make Calgary Canada's first suburbless city. When the inevitable annexation takes place this year, Calgary will sit alone at the confluence-of the Bow and Elbow rivers without a suburb of any kind visible on the horizon, even from its highest hill. It will have absorbed Calgary has taken a different route to modern metropolitan organization from Toronto, Winnipeg or Montreal, Instead of two governments—one metropolitan and one local-a single city government will operate what was once half a dozen municipalities. This development results from the determination of the provincial government to reorganize its municipalities into larger and more efficient units.

The first step was to combine rural unicipalities into counties. Then it provided machinery to enable suburbs to force the cities to annex them: finally it established an overall planning system to make sure that suburbia doesn't spring all over again outside present city

A number of special circumstances in the Calgary area accelerated the annexation process. Primarily there was the inability of the suburbs to finance the services the taxpayers demanded. In other cities, suburban growth was engendered at least in part by the search of people for more room on which to build fine homes. In Calgary, the reverse was true, with few exceptions

People moved out to build sub-marginal houses in sub-marginal areas. All these areas depended upon Calgary for water and power and fire protection. Sewage systems were not installed. Jerry-built ses were thrown together on under

Creating Suburban Slum

Ordinary mortgages were not available to builders in these areas, so the residents paid exorbitant interest rates is that Calgary, with a population apon heavily discounted mortgages. It was common practice for suburban residents to sign a mortgage for $5,000 at 8 per cent and get only $4,000 in cash.

ually extended its boundaries to absorb the slums. It was a costly process. The city usually had to make large capital outlays installing sewer and water services, paving streets and building schools in the new areas, as well as extending police and fire protection. One by one, the outlying suburbs came in and only Bowness, a town of 12,000 on the extreme

Every farmer on the edge of a boomng city naturally hoped to get rich subdividing his land, Without control, Calgary real estate developers would have stepped into the farm land and created a dozen Calgary Regional Planning Board which is absolute monarch of real estate development between Calgary and the Banff Park gates. It put a complete kibosh on all suburban development. Around the settled area it established a "Country Residential" zone. In this area it made five acres the minimum lot on which a country home could be built. It established building standards which were as rigid as those imposed by cities. This completely hived off the subdividers. In the past they have bought close-in suburban tracts for $1,500 to $2,000 an acre. Broken up into five lots at $1,500 each, it yielded $7,500 an acre. When the minimum lot size is five acres, only well heeled home builders can afford to build. The rules dampened down the demand for country acreage and the price de-

One House-20 Acres

Outside the vastly expanded Calgary city limits, a further restriction is imposed. A zone defined as "Agricultural Parkway" is established in which the minimum acreage on which a house can be built is 20 acres. This prevents develop-ment of small holdings in strictly farming

The rules are so rigorously enforced that a farmer who gets permission to sell a 20-acre parcel for a residence cannot sell a second parcel until construction of a house on the first is completed.

All this makes mincemeat of the ancient concept that a free man's property is his own to do with what he wishes. Certainly a planner's whim can direct the flow of house building in one direction, stifle it in another. Such decisions will enrich holders of favorably situated land and prevent realization by the less fortu-Town planning is impossible unless the planners have the power to direct,

The result of all these developments proaching 300,000, has enough land within its boundaries to take care of the home building needs of a city of 600,000. Curiously enough, the city has managed to digest all its annexed territory without any discomfort politically. The ingested areas residents have not ganged up to elect aldermen from their areas. No protests have been voiced about discrimination against the new districts. The than anyone even hoped it might in the

REP. Chet Holifield of California found think more often of its luck than its grievances.

The fundamental problem in Canadian-American relations can be easily ex-pressed—Canadians know far too much about the United States and Americans do not know nearly enough about Canada. No Canadian thinks there is anything wrong when he leans on a friendly neighbor's fence and shouts advice to the United States. But his protests would startle heaven if any American chose to exercise a similar privilege with respect to Canada. cans must continue to grin even though they may find it hard to bear it.

It should be added that Canada sometimes can be a supplementary conscience for America. Every wise American should look again at any American policy, par-ticularly in world affairs, that has aroused sharp and sustained criticism in Canada. For Canada can derive neither profit nor pleasure from America's mistakes. If Canada is angry, it may be more than the foam of sensitive nationalism. There may again have a visitor like Mr. Pearson. Where else can you find a prime minister who has won the Nobel Peace Prize and who also cherishes his life-time pass to be something wrong in American policy, or more probably, in the way that policy has been presented to the world.

President Johnson and Prime Minister Pearson cannot judge their talks by practical agreements. Their conference was never intended to be that sort of a meet-ing. They wanted to build a friendly foundation for future co-operation. They wanted to discuss some current Canadian American problems in their long-range implications. They wanted to exchange ideas on the present shape of world affairs. On all these matters they made encouraging progress. The President, for example, listened with gratitude to Mr. Pearson's report on President de Gaulle

—a gratitude which was increased by the owledge that Mr. Pearson was too experienced a statesman to pretend to mediate between France and America. This general review of world problems provided the ideal setting for the consideration of the narrower issues of direct concern to Canada and the United States.

President Johnson knew exactly what he was doing when he invited Mr. Pearson to write to him or phone him very frequently. Mr. Pearson is in no danger of abusing this privilege or becoming a nuisance. Few leaders of the non-Com-munist world can give President Johnson better advice than Mr. Pearson can bring, or advice so deeply rooted in a compre-hensive experience. It is good to know or Senator Magnuson, then it must be the that the two men have begun their coluckiest country in the world. And it might operation on such friendly terms.

Married Women and Pension

Now that more details have been given officially concerning the new federal plan to increase pensions on a contributory basis the suspected serious omission in respect of certain married women has been confirmed. A letter pointing out this possibility was sent to Miss LaMarsh some time ago, on behalf of a group. Her reply was little more than a routine one and a copy to our Liberal member of Parliament was not acknowledged.

The omission relates to those married who do not seek employment but who stay to run their homes, bring their children and care for their husbands. Is there any other form of self-employment by the women of Canada which contributes more to the welfare of the country than that done by these married women? Yet they are given no opportunity to augment their old-age security by being included in the proposed contributory scheme.

thing for nothing but they want the same opportunity to contribute as that given to those whose self-employment is car-ried on outside the home. It is far more probable that a greater number of mar-ried women who did not go out to work will be amongst those who may be forced to apply for old-age security before they are 70, with some even forced to apply at 65 and face life with $51 per month.

While it is true that at the time of death the same total amount may have been received no matter when old-age pension commences, is this a valid reason why these self-employed married women should be excluded from the contributory scheme?

In your editorial on the subject you suggest that more workers will be en-couraged to retire at 65 and that this will have some effect on the national employment picture. Does the scheme not suggest also that there will be more inducement for women to go out to work, in order to get the coverage which is not now given to some of them in the new scheme, and thus add to the unemployment of men?

To Overcome Prejudice

Emeritus of the Central Baptist Church, Victoria, which you published on January

In this letter Mr. Rowell suggests that the cause of Christian unity is not being served by the present Vatican Council because the Roman authorities expressly state that the doctrines which actually divide Protestants from the Roman Church are to remain "and no concessions are to be made concerning them." He points out that Protestants also have convictions. one of which is "that none of the reforms proposed by the Second Vatican Council have any relationship whatever to the differences which still remain vital."

I respectfully suggest that this view oversimplifies the case. The history of theological opinion in the Church of Rome does not show the rigidity which Mr. Row-ell's letter implies. For instance, the doctrine of the Mass, which he mentions, is now expressed by Roman theologians in a way which is acceptable to many non-Romans, The Protestants' own understanding of the Lord's Supper has similarly undergone enrichment since Reformation

This has come about, I submit, be-cause there has been cross-fertilization of ideas. What often happens when people from different traditions get together in a brotherly spirit is that both sides to a controversy come to see that the particu-lar formulas which divided them can be Jan. 27, 1944—Ot- not necessarily verbally altered but trans-tawa: The govern-cended by a new total understanding of ment will seek Par- the religion as a whole. My attention has been drawn to a let-ter from the Rev. J. B. Rowell, Pastor concerning their meaning within the context of that other church's life and thought.

Past refusal to do this on the part of Rome has led to many Roman Catholic misapprehensions about what Protestants really believe. It is surely hopeful that Rome's willingness to expose herself in the Second Vatican Council shows a new spirit in her which will enable us all to understand her, and perhaps to understand ourselves, somewhat better. A case in point is the possibility that Vatican II may define the status of bishops in the Roman hierarchy in such a way as to put the earlier definition of papal infallibility in a light not previously understood by many Protestants

It would be a tragedy if Rome's new willingness to discuss were met on the Protestant side by intransigence-by exactly the same sort of refusal to debate which Protestants used to lament in the Roman attitude. We can never hope to transcend our differences if we won't talk. Nor can we expect Rome to deny what she believes true, or even to question it, before conversation begins. As soon expect the Protestants to agree to query the authority of the Scripture before opening conversations with Rome.

What the ecumenical movement, both among Protestants and Roman Catholics, seeks to do is to break down the barriers of mere prejudice on either side so that real "dialogue" can take place all along the line. It is first and foremost an educational movement through mutual understanding must be achieved before we can expect to find any road to mutual agreement, Those of us "in" the ecumenical movement sincerely believe that by putting into practice Christ's own to create family al- with a sincere desire for knowledge and directive "to love one another" we may

INSIDE POLITICS

With Douglas Fisher, M.P.

Wouldn't you know it! Mr. Pearson reties us to another Motherland just when I snipped most of my own cloying strands to the old one. Not long ago I got a letter from an official of the Royal Canadian Legion in my region, It asked my assistance as a Member of Parliament to ensure that the Red Ensign should be Canada's flag. This is the official stand of the Legion, presently bright and strong in order to counter any other

I am a member of the Legion and a grate ful admirer of its brilliant success in achiev-ing a good program for veterans of the last war. It was hard, and it took much pondering for me to decide to tell the Legion official that I would not support the Red Ensign as our national flag. Past of the difficulty was the normal reflex of the politician. The Legion is a strong organization, providing the central social and recreational point of many towns in my riding.

I do not dislike the Red Ensign or the Union Jack. In fact, the Union Jack's beauty in the breeze triggers schoolboy memories of my pudgy hand agitating its replica with delight during visits of governors-general such as Willingdon and Bessborough.

Neither Will Do

But it's my own conviction that neither the Ensign nor the Jack will do as the national flag Mr. Pearson is to give us before April, 1965. The reasons are largely negative, centring around the reactions of French-Canadians and those of other stock to whom they cannot be loved symbols. We have slipped past the stage of looking backwards with great satisfaction. Perhaps no institution represents this more to me than the Legion in its anachronism

A recent issue of the Legionary gave a push-to my denial of support for the Ensign.

A letter in it put the case for an increase in the veterans' pensions. One could use the arguments put forth for the Canada Pension Plan, but this correspondent used one I find preposterous. Its gist was that veterans had sacrificed for their country and, in the suffer-ing, their life expectancy was cut short by several years. Surely this argument can only take in the gullible who were not in the

Aside from those who suffered wounds or the small number who were caught up in the hellishness of Hong Kong or other POW situations, the overwhelming majority of veter-ans had more regular food and better medical and dental care than they would have had in civilian life. Further, the fact that the majority volunteered set up an atmosphere that could be described, at the least, as not psychologically unhealthy.

Most troops in any of the three services were ancillary or supporting, rather than combatants like the infantryman, the aircrew bods, or the corvette sailors. That is, the majority of our veterans neither fired nor ducked a shot in anger. Therefore, the generalization that the million or more veterans across our country have a short fall in life compared to their non-veteran fellows is about as reasonable as that trade union mem-bers in Canada will all vote for the NDP the Canadian Labour Congress sup

Such flamboyant "old-soldiering" is silly enough. It puts a claim on the new genera-tions in Canada based on an unfair assump tion. But this issue of the Legionary had a more galling claim: that we should support the Red Ensign because it is the flag under which our old comrades fought and died. Perhaps it was different in the air force and the navy. The only Red Ensigns I ever saw in the army were on the blanco and brass occasions when some red-tabbed gent was in residence or making the rounds. I suppose, in a figurative way, that if a Div. HQ or General Crerar had Red Ensigns flying over them, then Canadians fought and died under the Red Ensign. In reality, of course, there were ruddy few Ensigns where the guy with the Bren or the Sherman or the 25-pounder was fighting.

The kind of hyperbole, the professional patriotism, found in these statements is somewhat typical of the official expression of the Legion. I know many veterans, in-cluding many Legion members, share my distaste for its accentuation of Britishness and the fond respect accorded high military rank in the Legion. One does not expect the Royal Canadian Legion to debunk our mili-tary brass, but it would be sensible, in view of the revelations of historians and biographers, to drop myths such as that Haig was a great general, or that Bomber Harris ap-plied the key which ended the last war, or that Winston Churchill was a supreme military strategist,

It is natural enough that the Legion should live off, even consecrate, the military participation of Canadians, especially in the two major wars. Our record was excellent. But in this process the Legion traps itself and us in a web of sentimental cloth which we wear no longer. We do not fit emotion-ally or in simple daily contact with the staunchly British context. It hardly needs saying that it is laughingly apparent to all but the cliche-caught politician that our French-speaking compatriots would fit even more awkwardly within the glory of the Fifth Republic

Flag Tradition

Perhaps I express more than a personal opinion when I claim that one wonderfully satisfying part of being in the Canadian forces, at least in the last war, was the intuitive knowledge that we were uniqu proudly Canadian, rather than British or Al-

I have a simple thesis on the national flag: all we need is the declaration by our Parliament that this or that particular design is it, providing it is without large symbols of either Britain or France; then the celerity of the acceptance will shock the pro-tagonists of the Ensign or the Jack or the Fleur-des-lis. The importance of a flag is almost irrelevant today except as a symbolic coming-of-age. Weapons technology, resolved into ICBMs or bacteria, is part of the explanation. It means a looming kind of world which challenges mere flag nationalism or the folk memory of a flag tradition. It may seem stupid to say this when vio-lence in Panama is related to flags, but it is my hunch about Canada. What do you think?

OTTAWA (UPI) — Defence Minister Paul Hellyer was back in the capital today following an intensive investigation into the anti-submarine operations of Canadian forces on the Atlantic coast.

It was part of his department's re-evaluation of Canadia's future role in anti-submarine warfare, designed to chart a new course for the navy and the maritime air command of the RCAF.

Marketing Board Asked For Turkeys

DUNCAN - Establishment of a marketing board for turkey and egg producers was urged by Hamish Mutter, director of the Cowichan Agricultural Society and Farmers' Institute, at the group's 96th annual meeting Saturday.

He said a marketing board would help to ensure orderly marketing of these farm products, not only in B.C. but in other parts of Canada.

William Evans, a sheep breeder, who resigned his directorship in the Cowichan Agricultural Society when an illness left him blind, was the meeting.

Leafs, Habs Shutout Victims

By Canadian Press Break up Boston Bruins? It might be a trifle premature for any such suggestions.

But the Bruins are upsetting everything in the National Hockey League instead of behaving the way a drag-end club should.

In weekend play they swept to a pair of shutout victories.

Add that to the resurgence of New York Rangers, who rate only a notch higher in the tandings, and indications are that it's going to be a frantic struggle for those last couple of playoff positions.

The Bruins, backed by Eddie Johnston's fine goaltending, up-ended Toronto Maple Leafs 2.0 before a full house of 13, 909 fans in Boston Sunday night after drubbing the Cana-diens 6-0 in Montreal Saturday

WINGS EDGED

At the same time, Jacques Plante's netminding carried the Rangers to a win and a tie. Although outshot conclusively in both games, they shaded Detroit Red Wings 3-2 before a crowd of 15,925 in New York Sunday night after tying the Leafs 1-1 in Toronto Saturday.

The Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks were unable to resolve their private tussle for the NATIONAL LEAGUE No. 1 position in the standings. Montreal 2. Chicago No. 1 position in the standings.

Bowling is fun . . . except when the money is on the line. The money was at Dallas on Sunday which is why Laverne Carter of St. Louis put so much into every ball. She put enough to register three-game series of 683 to win women's all-star championship over Evelyn Teal (609) of Miami. New men's champion is Bob Strampe of Detroit who fired 715 series to defeat Tommy Tuttle (616) of Rural Hall, N.C. Laverne's 683 was a tourney record. (AP Wirephoto.)

Shutouts were also the fashion in the second division Sunday as a pair of upsets spiced the proceedings.

Sixth place Wanderers knocked Kickers out of the top spot when they grabbed a 1-0 decision on a tally by Doug Richardson. Veteran Ab Travis rapped in the only goal as Gorge, tripped surprised University of Victoria 1-0.

Oak Bay took advantage of Kicker's misfortune to step out in front with a 4-2 win over Dunlops.

"EXPO '67"

to play host to the world

1967 will be a year of pride for Canada, and every Canadian

Come and share in the wonder and excitement, as Canada stages its colourful "at home" party for the world, on the 100th Birthday of Confederation. The place: Montreal. The event: CANADIAN WORLD EXHIBITION '67 first truly universal and international exhibition ever held in North America. Today, "Expo '67" is vigorously on the move. All levels of government, business and industry are joining their efforts to make this a never-to-beforgotten event for you and millions of visitors from around the world. This year, the picturesque site of islands and lagoons in mid-St. Lawrence will be ready. Next year, theme buildings and the many national pavilions will rise. The imagination-stirring scope of the "Man and His World" theme will start to take shape. Canada's Universal and International Exhibition in Montreal offers inspiring opportunities for Canada to present her best face to the world. Visitors from abroad will see our accomplishments and our opportunities. We shall see at first hand the exciting shape of the world today, and of things to come. You'll want to be part of it. Plan to be there -

BOSLEY CROWTHER OF THE TIMES SAID:

⁶⁶A stunning visualization . . . Mr. Visconti has been able to magnificently translate in terms of brilliant pictures almost like paintings, the autumnal moods of change and decay that the onrush of social revolution brought to one family and to the spirits of one strong man.

The quality of the presentation . . . is in a slow, rhythmic, tempered account of the changes that he realizes are inevitable.

It is in the superb illustration of a special way of life, elaborate and luxurious, but confined by rigid restraints, surrounded by lush decoration but internally cramped and dour. And it is in the interesting suggestions of the nature of the Prince, the soi-disant Leopard of the title, played by Mr. Lancaster . . . the American star gives a physically forceful presentation of the massive, imperious man upon whom the mood of melancholy descends most heavily at the ball. Our present year is 1964, is it not?

Well, by 1984, unless we wake up to what's going on in this last Canadian outpost of the man who dares to be different, here is an approximation of what we may expect: Our Saanich Peninsula will be yet another of Van-couver's bedroom suburbs.

Victoria itself will be no a satellite of the mainland octopus than West Van-couver, New Westminster and the Fraser Valley towns

You cigarette smokers probably won't be around to witness this final degradation of a once-lovely city and its environs. I am tempted, almost, to envy

Because, believe me, to anyone who remembers when the deep country began just past Cadboro Bay, the spectacle will be pretty

You think this is scary stuff? As a matter of fact, the change is already under way. I'll admit, though, that total—accomplishment may take rather longer than I've indicated, since the factor which will hasten our can-nibilization by Vancouver can't be accurately estimated as yet.

This factor is the state of communications between our Island Eden and Canada's nasty, sooty, foggy, seambursting western metropolis.

When a man can get from there to here in 90 minutes, the flood gates will crumple and the hordes from conti-nental North America will

And never doubt the time will come. Premier Bennett (he'll last, he doesn't smoke) will see to that.

From our stance in the future, let us survey the scene. The complex of provincial government buildings has, of course, expanded to cover most of James Bay area. It is blocked from the sea only by the phalanx of high-rises that marches unbroken from Ogden Point to Beacon Hill

On the other side, government now embraces the stately brick pile which was once a world-renowed hotel. "The Empress," as long-term residents still call the old place, was transformed into another office warren for an expanding civil service back around 1965.

The downtown sector, which in the later years of the Wilson civic administration became quaintly charming to the point of nausea, is one enormous tourist mart. Unless they work there, Victoria residents tend to avoid the area, shopping entirely in their home dis-

Beyond Victoria, the Big Suburb rolls north past Sidney-which it long ago en-gulfed-to Satellite Channel and Salt Spring Island. The farmlands are all gone, the last of them swallowed by subdivisions, and the housewife shopping in one or other of the new centres gets her fruit and vegetables entirely from California.

* * * That's progress, that is, and no doubt we should be overjoyed to contemplate the advantages which will multiply with our popula-

But as one who came here to get away from progress its brassier manifestations, I can't help viewing with alarm when I learn that Vancouver realtors are scouting this fair peninsula like bird-dogs in search of options on acreage.

Once that starts, the end is predictable, unless we can find some swift and positive way of establishing a perma-nent "green-belt" which will set limits on the subdivi-

How we accomplish this, I don't know, unless it be by a virtual revolution in landhandling policies . . . per-haps even the adoption of a lease system under which no acreage designated as farmland can pass into the hands

But if we can't, we're headed straight for the Big Suburb, and a life much less pleasant than the uncrowded existence we enjoy here

The sea around us may be restless but it is far

Viewers who couldn't believe their ears on the or Channels 2 and 6 Thursday night, were treated to a second run-through on Channel 5, Friday night. Almost everyone is familiar with the many surface sounds that can be heard at the beach or at sea the waves, winds, calls of birds, ships whistles and the bells or horns of navigational aids.

The progress gave us noises made by fish and the noises associated with geophysical exploration—the "pings" of the fathometer and the sounds of seismic

The fish noises were the most fascinating. They sounded like domestic animals in a barnyard and sounded like domestic animals in a barryard and sometimes like the wilds of a jungle. In a recorded geophysical study a bomb was set off; just before the bomb exploded, sea creatures were "chattering" but right after the explosion there was silence on the sound track. Then the fish started "talking" again, a louder than before.

The program was one of excellence. The use of the films and the studied commentary made the living room the perfect classroom for a lesson on the ocean and its many faces,

The scheduling of the program during the early evening hours to allow young people to view, listen

TID BITS: Actor-comedian Jackie Gleason has signed a $6,000,000 contract with CBS-TV which v allow him to produce weekly television shows for the 1964-65 season in Miami.

The possibility that Bing Crosby might do a situation comedy series under the right circumstances has the network boys hopping: CBS-TV has already talked to him, and a sponsor was quickly set.

The effect of Shakespeare's works on people for of the exceptional children's show "Exploring" on Channel 5, Saturday, Feb. 8. Through pantomime, actors will perform as Dr. Albert Hibbs narrates the evolution and history of the theatre. Danny Kaye has begun to deservedly reap the first of many expected awards for his Wednesday night show. Fame Magazine's 15th annual poll of television editors, critics and columnists have voted him as "Champion of Champions" performer and best comedian. His show received the best network program and best variety show honors.

FUEL PROBLEM STALLS LAUNCH OF SATURN I

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)-A fuelling problem in the first stage forced postponement today of an attempt to launch the Saturn I rocket which is intended to orbit the world's heaviest satellite.

When the postponement was first announced the officials said they would make another launching attempt Wednesday. However, they said later a new firing date had not been determined.

Mayor, who is not only an actor, writer and producer, owns "Spring Thaw." In the early years, it limped along in a small Toronto boite, with a devoted cult of admirers. Gradually its fame grew until it graduated to the venerable Royal Alexandra Theatre in Toronto.

A couple of years ago Moore bought control of the show and it is now "a private enterprise" which will spend the next six onths touring Canada, for a total of 10.000 miles.

Saturday night's closing performance was sent on its way with loud "Bravos!" resounding through the theatre. Victorians loved it . . . particularly Dave Broadfoot's line: "Social Credit is like the Liberals, without the convenience of democracy.'

Also checking up on the last show Saturday night was Alan Lund of Toronto, the dancer-choreographer-director, who worked with Moore on "Spring Thaw" and devised the hilarious Bullshoiev Ballet number which closes the show.

Lund, as all the boys out in Esquimalt know, danced his way to fame in the wartime Navy Show with his wife, Blanche. Theirs is a remarkable story. After the war, they hit the top bistros in New York — the Plaza, Copacabana, St. Regis Roof, etc. — and then Blanche was stricken with

A courageous gal, she came back to dance again—and incidentally, to raise a family of three boys. Alan told us Saturday night she was "back home, looking after the youngsters," and regretted he couldn't bring her out for the opening of the new show.

We also chatted backstage with Dave Broadfoot (the sign on his dressing room door was inscribed "Dave Blackfoot," presumably in honor of his Indian monologue) and Jack Duffy, the Toronto boy who is a look-alike for Sinatra

You may have wondered, as I did, about our story the other day on the University of Victoria worm experiments in psychology.

This is the official conclusion, anyway.

My conclusion: don't grind up a professor for student consumption if he's a rat.

And so on, 1,000 times. That's what a Times reporter is doing as punishment for writing the other day that the man with the longest service is Deputy Chief Harry

It seems that white-thatched, ruddy cheeked Tommy joined the department two months before the Deputy Chief. At the end of this month he will have com-

"Why is Victoria's phone book so mixed up?" asks Times reader James Turner of 29 Cambridge Street. In some cases, he says, the exchange dial sign is given as EV; in others as 38. Likewise GR is intermingled with 47s.

Now that cigarettes have become a major news topic these days, the Swiss have come up with an ingenious device

NEW YORK (AP)-President Johnson painted a glowing pic-ture of U.S. business last week —if an income tax cut is quickly approved by Congress.

His qualified prediction that 1964 will be a year of soaring prosperity came in his annual conomic message to Congress.

Meanwhile, the Tax Reduction

Bill was approved by the Senate finance committee and indicawere that the measure would reach the Senate this week. It already has House of representatives approval.

The stock market apparently liked what it heard from the president. It spurted to another historic high.

Here's what Johnson had to say about the U.S. Economy: Gross national product (total of all goods and services)-it topped the $600,000,000,000 annual rate for the first time during the final quarter of 1963 and is expected to hit $623,000,000,-

Personal income-attained an average per capita of $2,500 in 1963 for an after-tax total of $500,000.000.000: expected to increase by $8,800,000,000.

Electric Firm Offers Shares To Canadians

TORONTO (CP) — Federal Pacific Electric Co. of Newark, N.J., is offering 49 per cent of its wholly owned Canadian subsidiary to Canadian inves tors.

B. W. Ball, president of the subsidiary, PFE-Pioneer Elec-tric Ltd., said the move is timed to fall in with the federal budget measures aimed at promoting more Canadian wnership in foreign - controlled firms, but also is the outgrowth of the company's be-lief in local ownership.

He said it is the first share offering made by a U.S. sub-sidiary in the electrical field.

Our present year is 1964, is it not?

Well, by 1984, unless we wake up to what's going on in this last Canadian outpost of the man who dares to be different, here is an approximation

Our Saanich Peninsula will be yet another of Vancouver's bedroom suburbs. Victoria itself will be no less a satellite of the main-land octopus than West Vancouver, New Westminster and the Fraser Valley towns

Because, believe me, to anyone who remembers when the deep country be-gan just past Cadboro Bay, the spectacle will be pretty horrible!

You think this is scarce stuff? As a matter of fact, the change is already under way. I'll admit, though, that total accomplishment may take rather longer than I've which will hasten our cannibilization by Vancouver can't be accurately estimated as yet.

This factor is the state of

On the other side, government now embraces the stately brick pile which was "The Empress," as long-term residents still call the old place, was transformed into another office warren for an expanding civil service back around 1965.

The downtown sector, which in the later years of the Wilson civic administration became quaintly charming to the point of nausea, is one enormous tourist mart. Unless they work there, Victoria residents tend to avoid the area, shopping entirely in their home dis-

Gunman Jumps Moving Car

VANCOUVER (CP)—Police said they suspect that an attempt to take revenge on a narcotics informer was the motive for a shooting incident in the east end of the city Sunday. A gunman clung to the side of a moving car and pumped three revolver shots into it before the car veered out of control and crushed him against a steel fence.

The 33-year-old gunman is in good condition in hospital with a broken leg and cuts. A man and woman in the car escaped injury and are being held for investigation as material witnesses. Police said the alleged assailant was arrested in San Die of last September on a charge of smuggling five ounces to heroin into the United States from Mexico. He returned his home here after being freed on $10,000 ball.
